Holocaust witnesses return to the camps

Dachau. Seven decades after the Holocaust-era concentration camp closed, a survivor and a liberator plan their return. Two Philly men, one who was a prisoner and one who fought for the U.S. Army, are invited to the anniversary of the camp's liberation. They say they want to keep the memories alive. PAGE 02

Survivor and liberator return to Dachau camp

Remembering. A concentration camp survivor and a soldier whose unit liberated the camp return to Germany for the 70th anniversary.

On April 29, 1945, Ernest Gross was a Romanian Jew in the German concentration camp of Dachau. He was waiting in a line that led to the gas chamber when he saw guards at the camp throw down their weapons and flee.

Allied forces had arrived. Among them was Don Greenbaum, an artillery soldier whose unit was attached to the 45th Infantry Division.

Next week, the pair of Philadelphia-area residents will fly to Germany to take part in the 70th Anniversary of the concentration camp's liberation.

Greenbaum, 90, believed his unit was being sent to capture a German supply depot. What he saw has remained with him ever since.

"I can't visualize a guy going home at night, kissing his children, knowing that in the morning he will send an innocent person to his death. It was a job," Greenbaum said.

They did not meet until about four years ago, when Gross noticed a newspaper article about Greenbaum's wartime experience. Gross contacted Greenbaum because he wanted to thank one of the soldiers he credited with saving his life. For the past few years, the pair have visited local schools and groups to talk about Dachau.

Talking about what they have seen did not come naturally to either man.

For Gross, this trip will mark the second time he has returned to the death camp. His first wife was a Holocaust survivor who died 19 years after they were married. They never spoke of their wartime experiences.

Her death left him with the feeling that he never really knew his spouse. When he remarried, he decided to tell his new wife everything.

"She said, 'You will show me where you were standing when you were liberated.'"

Greenbaum is motivated by a rising tide of Holocaust denial.

"I'm 90 years old. In 10 years there will be no one left to tell the story," Greenbaum said. "Liberators and survivors need to tell the story."

He still remembers the smell of the place. And of seeing rail cars stuffed with bodies. Those feelings give him a sense of anxiety over the visit.

"I know what's going to happen to me," Greenbaum said. "I'm going to be very uncomfortable."

After the war, Greenbaum returned to the Philadelphia area. He said he still works in industrial sales.

Gross spent two years in a displaced person camp, until emigrating to America, where he learned to cut lox at a deli at 7th and Girard. He went on to own his own delicatessens.

History

In his words

Gross was 15 when he first found himself in Auschwitz. A man in line told him to lie about his age to qualify for a job, a tip that likely saved his life. He spent a year in the camps, and was eventually transferred to a sub-camp at Dachau, where he remembers trying to eating grass that had just begun to peak above the soil.

Gross said he was unusually skinny and weak, when he was ordered onto a train headed to Dachau's main camp. He was ordered off the train when Allied bombers destroyed the rail line. He remembers walking to the camp, where he found himself in a long line, likely about to be executed, when the camp was liberated.

Dachau

Established 1933, the first concentration camp:

- Originally held communists, political prisoners and intellectuals
- Infamous words over gate read "Arbeit Macht Frei" which means "Work will set you free."
- 31,000 were rescued there on April 29, 1945.
- 41,000 are believed to have died there.

Ready to ride? Indego bike-share service launches today

It's been hard to miss the bright blue Indego bike-share docks getting installed around the city.

Today, the bikes will be ready to roll.

The Indego bike-share program will launch at noon in Eakins Oval with a ceremonial ride that's open to the public.

There are multiple rental options.

Indego30 cost $15 per month and comes with one free hour of biking. (Additional hours per ride cost $4 each).

IndegoFlex costs $10 per year, and bike rental costs $4 per hour.

For people who just want to swipe their card and ride, bikes can be rented for $4 per half-hour.

About 60 bike rental docks have been set up around the city.

Meanwhile, Uber has offered a special one-day bike helmet sale to mark the day. Anyone who donates $10 through the taxi app to the Bicycle Coalition of Greater Philadelphia Thursday gets a helmet. Uber will match all donations.

The $6 million project's funding is split 50-50 between the city and a mix of federal and foundation funding.

Tow truck kills Philly Parking Authority worker

A lot officer for the Philadelphia Parking Authority was killed Wednesday morning after he was hit by one of the authority's own tow trucks.

The PPA identified the worker who died as Jeffrey Bayers, 60, a 13-year employee.

Police say Bayers died when a tow truck backed over him in a PPA lot on the 2500 block of Weccacoe Avenue near Columbus Boulevard and Oregon Avenue.

The PPA is conducting an investigation into what happened.

There was no word on any disciplinary action against the driver, the authority said.

The driver was not identified.

"It's a tragic accident," authority spokesman Marty O'Rourke said. "We're looking into seeing what happened.

O'Rourke says Bayers' death marks the first time in recent memory that a PPA employee has died on the job. It may possibly be the first such death in the authority's history.

According to Bayers' Facebook page, he was a Flyers fan who graduated from Frankford High School and lived in Maple Shade in Burlington County, New Jersey.

Drugs. First grader brings baggies of heroin to school

As police investigate the source of bags of heroin that were brought to a Kensington elementary school by a first-grader, parents hope the school will prevent further incidents from happening.

It's not the first time drugs have been brought on campus, said Lamar Ragland, 30, the father of a 4th-grader at William Cramp Elementary School. In 2013, another student brought crack-cocaine to the same school, located on the 3400 block of North Mascher Street in Kensington.

Ragland said that incident "was swept under the rug by the school."

But Philadelphia School District spokesman Fernando Gallard denied that, saying the previous incident at Cramp was referred to police, the Department of Human Services, and the parents were notified.

In the latest incident on Tuesday, 15 plastic baggies of heroin were found in the school, according to police.

Multiple students brought the bags to teachers.

Quoted

"I would like for it to be safer. Don't attempt to sweep it under the rug. Let the parents know so we can all work together so we can prevent things like this. At the end of the day we all need to protect our children."

Ragland

The teachers were transported to the Special Victims Unit for interviews, and the children were brought to St. Christopher's Hospital for Children for evaluations, police said.

No arrests were reported and police had not confirmed the origin of the drugs as of Wednesday, a police spokeswoman said.

"I believe that what's going on is it's out in the open in the homes. They just have free access to it," Ragland said. "It becomes a danger, because what if one of them were to actually put in their system?"

Pope Francis plans Cuba stop before landing in Philly

Papal visit. The pope will visit the deeply Catholic island before he comes to the U.S. on Sept. 22.

The Holy Father
WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

Before he gets to Philadelphia and New York City in September, Pope Francis will visit Cuba, the Vatican said on Wednesday.

The visit, en route to the United States, will cap his success in bringing the former enemies together after more than half a century of distrust.

Vatican spokesman Father Federico Lombardi did not specify how long the stop in Cuba would last, saying only that Francis had accepted invitations made by the Cuban government and the Cuban Roman Catholic Church.

It will be the Argentine pope's first visit to Cuba as pontiff. Both his predecessors, John Paul II and Benedict XVI, visited the island and met revolutionary leader Fidel Castro.

Last December, Havana and Washington announced after 18 months of secret diplomacy brokered by the pope's diplomats and Canada that the two sides were working to re-open embassies in their respective capitals.

"Both President Raul Castro and President Obama recognized and explicitly thanked the Holy Father for his gesture," said Monsignor Jose Felix Perez of the Cuban Catholic Bishops' Conference. REUTERS

"His mediation, without a doubt, was effective and in line with the Christian spirit that always brings out reconciliation as the solution to conflicts."

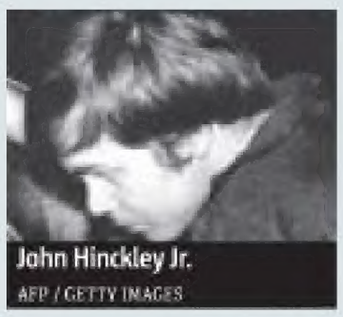
Five things you need to know

1 Would-be Reagan assassin seeks expanded freedom in Virginia

Would-be U.S. presidential assassin John Hinckley Jr. should be allowed to reside full time away from the mental hospital where he has lived since shooting Ronald Reagan in 1981, his lawyer argued in federal court on Wednesday.

Hinckley, 59, has been allowed since December 2013 to leave Washington's St. Elizabeths Hospital for 17 days a month to stay with his mother in Williamsburg, Virginia.



John Hinckley Jr.
AFP / GETTY IMAGES

In his opening statement, Hinckley's lawyer Barry Levine requested he be granted convalescent leave, the equivalent of outpatient status, so he could live full time with his 89-year-old mother.

"There is no dispute that Mr. Hinckley is clinically ready for the next step in treatment, which is convalescent leave," Levine told U.S. District Judge Paul Friedman.

Hinckley shot Reagan and three others, including White House press secretary James Brady, in a bid to impress actress Jodie Foster, with whom he was obsessed. A jury found him not guilty of attempted assassination by reason of insanity.

Testimony is expected to wrap up next week, but it could be months before Friedman renders a decision. REUTERS

Man 'planning terror attack on churches' arrested in France

Suspect. Police found weapons and bulletproof vests in the suspect's car and at his home.

French Prime Minister Manuel Valls (C) and French Interior Minister Bernard Cazeneuve (L) arrive at the Sainte Therese de l'Enfant Jesus church in Villejuif, outside Paris, on April 22, 2015. / GETTY IMAGES

An Algerian man suspected of planning an imminent attack on a church has been arrested in Paris, with police discovering Kalashnikovs, hand guns and ammunition in his possession, top officials said on Wednesday.

The 24-year old electronics student, who is also suspected of the murder of a 32-year-old woman, was detained on Sunday after he apparently shot himself by accident and called an ambulance. He was not named.

France heightened surveillance of potential suspects and deployed troops to patrol sensitive sites after Islamist militants killed 17 people in January in attacks on the offices of the Charlie Hebdo satirical weekly and a Jewish food store.

He said the man had previously come to the attention of the French authorities as possibly wanting to go to Syria. Police had made checks on him in 2014 and 2015 without finding anything that would warrant further investigation.

Paris chief prosecutor Francois Molins said a search of the man's phones and laptops "revealed that he was in touch with another person, who could be in Syria, with whom he was discussing ways to carry out an attack and who had specifically asked him to target a church."

Le Monde newspaper said police believe that the suspect had tried on Sunday to steal the car of the woman who was later found dead and shot himself by accident during the aborted robbery. Her blood was found on his jacket, Molins said.

Molins said the Algerian had made "far-fetched" comments, claiming that he had become afraid of holding so many weapons and had injured himself when trying to throw them in the river Seine, which flows through Paris. REUTERS

"Detailed documents that were found established beyond doubt that the individual was planning an imminent attack, probably on one or two churches."

Bernard Cazeneuve, Interior Minister

Five facts about Matthew Weiner

We hope you're just as excited as we are about 'Mad Men' creator Matthew Weiner guest editing Metro for our weekend edition. To get you ready, here are five things you might not know about him.

1 He's a former "Jeopardy!" champ.

2 He has four sons (but none of them are named Don)

3 Casting

85

85 men tried out for the part of Don Draper, and Weiner had to fight for then-unknown Jon Hamm.

4 He's known for being militant about plot details being revealed in advance of episodes airing, even going so far as including a list of specific plot points he hopes reviewers won't discuss in their articles when screeners are sent out.

5 He's meticulous about every aspect of the show's production, and occasionally includes costume notes in the scripts when he feels strongly about what someone should be wearing. METRO

Google rolls out new U.S. wireless service

Google on Wednesday launched a new U.S. wireless service that switches between Wi-Fi and cellular networks to curb data use and keep phone bills low.

The service, Google's first entry into the wireless business, will work only on the company's Nexus 6 phones and be hosted through Sprint Corp and T-Mobile's networks, Google said in a statement.

The service, called Project Fi, will automatically switch between the two networks and more than 1 million open, free Wi-Fi spots, depending on which signal is strongest.

The service will cost $20 a month plus $10 per gigabyte of data used. Customers will get money back for unused data.

Video game sales turnaround.
Sony raises profit view again

Japanese consumer electronics firm Sony raised its earnings estimates for the second time in three months on Wednesday, citing higher than expected sales of video games and digital cameras.

The Tokyo-based firm is finally reaping the benefit of restructuring efforts after weak TV and smartphone sales brought years of heavy losses. After massive cost cuts, it has sought targeted expansion under Chief Executive Kazuo Hirai in lucrative areas such as sensors for smartphone cameras.

Profit

$569M

Sony said it probably made an operating profit of $569 million in the year ended March 31.

Sony is set to make its official earnings statement for the year on April 30. Before Wednesday's move, there was an upward revision in February.

As part of its restructuring, Sony has spun off its TV business. It also plans to split off its audio and video business as part of a new strategy to encourage greater autonomy among its subsidiaries. REUTERS

Andrew Garfield and Emma Stone are never getting back together... ever

GETTY IMAGES

After dating for three years — so basically, a decade in Hollywood — "The Amazing Spider-man" stars Andrew Garfield and Emma Stone went on a "break" two weeks ago. But unfortunately this is no Ross and Rachel situation. According to Us magazine, a source close to the couple says they're done for good. Apparently, Garfield got a little too into character preparing for his role in "Silence." "He's been in a dark place for months getting into the role. He wasn't being the best partner," a source tells the magazine. Can someone put this guy in a light-hearted rom-com next? Sheesh!

Amy Schumer pranks Kanye West

In other Kardashian-Jenner news, because there is never a day where they make headlines just once, Kim Kardashian and Kanye West totally got punked by Amy Schumer at the Time 100 Gala this week. She fake tripped in front of the couple on the red carpet and sprawled on the ground, face first. Most people might lend a hand and help a girl up, but the couple just kind of stepped over her and carried on. Well, what else would you expect from Yeezus?

Bruce Jenner wears a dress

New photos appear to show former Olympic athlete Bruce Jenner in a striped dress outside his Malibu home. The New York Daily News published the photos a couple of days prior to Jenner's scheduled interview with Diane Sawyer. The interview is believed to be about Jenner's coming out as transgender. Rumors and speculation have followed Jenner for some time now, with many media groups remarking on the athlete's dramatic change in appearance. The Daily News reports that Jenner has also been seen wearing a sports bra: "A photo of the former Olympic gold medalist wearing what appeared to be a sports bra while riding his Harley Davidson motorcycle emerged Monday, leading many to assume the star had already undergone breast augmentation surgery." Jenner's interview airs Friday. MATT LEE

Sandra Bullock is hotter at 50 than you'll ever be

People magazine announced its "World's Most Beautiful Woman" yesterday: the lovely Sandra Bullock. In classic Bullock form, she laughed off the honor and instead says she's more honored to be the mother of her 5-year-old son Louis. "Real beauty is quiet. Especially in this town, it's just so hard not to say, 'Oh, I need to look like that,' " she tells People. "No, be a good person, be a good mom, do a good job with the lunch, let someone cut in front of you who looks like they're in a bigger hurry. The people I find most beautiful are the ones who aren't trying." We get it. You're hot and a good person and there is no living up to you.

What brought Blake Lively back to acting

Interview. The former "Gossip Girl" was pretty much done with acting, but the script for "The Age of Adaline" changed her mind.

"Age of Adaline" director Lee Toland Krieger claims that Blake Lively came in insisting she was the best person for the title role, but Lively herself begs to differ. "I didn't say I'm the best person for it, I just said that I really wanted it," she explains. "I could give you a whole list of people that would've been better for it. But I was the most aggressive, I'll tell you that much."

It makes sense that Lively would approach the role with such vigor, considering she had to cancel her hiatus from acting following the end of "Gossip Girl" in 2012. "I was on a TV show for six years. We shot 10 months a year," Lively explains. "I was just exhausted, and I didn't feel good at it anymore."

But she didn't block out Hollywood completely, with scripts still coming in. "I read 'Adaline' and thought, I can't not do this movie. I still wanted to be on a break, but I just thought I have to, have to be in this film," Lively remembers. "And then because it was such a special movie and such a special experience, I was reading other scripts and thought, how do I live up to that? And then I got pregnant, so I didn't have to."

It's a good thing she got over those feelings of inadequacy, too, because the role of Adaline — a woman born in 1906 who stops aging at age 29 — proved to be full of challenges.

"I always look for the closest thing to a character that I'm playing, and I try to meet that person and talk to that person. It's very hard to meet someone who's been alive for 100 years, and it's even harder to meet someone who's immortal," Lively admits. "So I thought, OK, when is a woman most defined by? When does she really blossom into who she is? And it's when they come of age. So if she came of age in the 1920s, I need to capture a woman from the 1920s who has that formality and who is stoic and very proper and very reserved and conservative, and then try to weave in some influence from the '60s. That's very, very different from where women came in the Edwardian era. One more thing

The future

And don't worry, she did find another script that measured up to "Age of Adaline," as she already has her next starring role carved out: "I'm doing a movie called 'All I See is You,' with Marc Forster directing and Jason Clarke," she says. "It's about a woman who loses her eyesight at a young age and then has an experimental surgery and gets her eyesight back, and how it effects their beautiful relationship and their marriage, which was so healthy when she was codependent, but now that she's not ... It's a very character-driven story." That should make for some interesting research as well.

Princess Leia won't be the only woman in "Star Wars" anymore. / PROVIDED

THINGS ARE GETTING BETTER — IN 'STAR WARS'

As you all know, the new trailer for "Star Wars VII: The Force Awakens" was released last weekend. As someone who grew up as a "Star Wars" fan, has a website named after a main character and carries a Boba Fett helmet and a lightsaber in her trunk (hey, it's best to be prepared), I was pretty psyched. And by "psyched," I mean there was undignified, ugly-crying when I watched it.

There was just nothing like "Star Wars" when I was a kid. There were certainly very few female characters like Princess Leia. She was bold, she didn't take orders, she could shoot far better than any Stormtrooper, and she was a galactic senator! The only issue I had was that there was only one of her. I actually remember asking a friend if no one had moms in the "Star Wars" universe when I was little.

When the first cast list for the new film came out, there was only one new woman (Daisy Ridley) on it, and seven new men. It's the reason I started Legion of Leia. So you can imagine the joy I've felt as woman after woman was added to the roster.

Guys might not think about it that much, but as I've said in many an article, representation does matter. I certainly didn't realize exactly how much it would mean to me, personally, when Lucasfilm President Kathleen Kennedy spoke at the opening ceremonies for Star Wars Celebration. She was asked which "Star Wars" character she would be, and she replied, "I don't have many choices. But that's going to change. ... Going forward with all we're talking about, there are going to be a lot of wonderful new [female] characters," going on to mention her daughters and how important this is.

I knew it was coming. The cast has been out there for months. However, hearing the female president of Lucasfilm saying this on stage in front of thousands of people, and even more watching the live broadcast around the world, made me feel like all the hard work — blogs, websites, Twitter posts, books, fan films, etc. — of female "Star Wars" fans have made an impact. Someone is listening, and it means more to me than I can say.

May the Force be with you.

Craft your beer

Skip the Bud Light and treat your palate to more flavorful brews at these four tried-and-true bars.

RACHEL VIGODA

Monk's Cafe

264 S. 16th St.
An oldie but a goodie, Belgian beer bar Monk's has been serving craft brews since 1997. Make your decision slightly easier and choose from the 20 beers on tap — or settle in with the Beer Bible and browse through page after page of options. But expect to wait for a seat: Both the front and the smaller back bars are typically packed.

Standard Tap

901 N. Second St.
It's all local, all the time at this multi-level Northern Liberties tavern, with a draft-only beer list featuring 20-plus brews made in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware. Yuengling is represented, of course, along with selections from Dock Street, Dogfish Head, Victory, Fox and more. The food menu also emphasizes local.

The Cambridge

1508 South St.
The only downside of the always-impressive draft list at this comfortably trendy South Street spot is that you'll want to order everything on it. There's always one or two old favorites included, but let your bartender or server guide you through the lesser-known choices. Or just close your eyes and point. Live a little.

Local 44

4333 Spruce St.
This neighborhood-y hangout lets you take the beer home with you: There's a bottle shop open until midnight daily. Or settle into a booth and choose from pours like Tired Hands HopHands and Bullfrog Funny Farmhouse Cider. Since this is West Philly, there are plenty of vegetarian and vegan options for when you get peckish.

7 Bands to see at the Center City Jazz Festival

Saturday's fest is spread out across five bars for your listening (and drinking) pleasure.

Matt Davis' Aerial Photograph will play Fergie's Pub. ERIKAKAPIN

While he admits that picking highlights is something like naming a favorite child, Center City Jazz Festival founder and artistic director Ernest Stuart is looking forward to a few particular sets in the fourth annual daylong fest. He names his bandmate in the Bhangra brass band Red Baraat, New York-based drummer Tomas Fujiwara and his quintet The Hook Up.

But then there's saxophonist Ben Schachter, who recently returned to his native Philadelphia to resume a teaching position at Temple University. And local legend Bootsie Barnes, playing the fest for the first time this year, on the new organ-based stage at Franky Bradley's.

"When I was in college I used to go to Ortlieb's every Wednesday and hear his band play," Stuart says of Barnes. "So it was an honor to be able to call him up and invite him to perform, and he graciously accepted."

This year's festival builds on the success of its past incarnations, including last year's sold-out event. More than a dozen bands will play overlapping sets throughout the day at five venues on and around Sansom Street, representing, as Stuart says, "really interesting bands coming from a lot of the subgenres of jazz."

To aid in navigating the schedule, here are a few can't-miss artists from the lineup, in addition to Stuart's recommendations.

West Philadelphia Orchestra

The Balkan brass party band will help set a festive mood with its early set. 1:30 p.m., MilkBoy, 1100 Chestnut St.

Ben Schachter & ReTrio

The recently returned saxophonist leads his long-running trio. 1:45 p.m., Time restaurant/bar, 1315 Sansom St.

Luis Bonilla & Four Swinging Bones

Afro-Cuban trombonist Bonilla shows off the versatility of his instrument with a battery of Latin Jazz trombone players. 2:45 p.m., Chris' Jazz Cafe, 1421 Sansom St.

Bootsie Barnes

The Philly tenor giant showcases the city's classic organ-jazz sound. 4 p.m., Franky Bradley's, 1320 Chancellor St.

Matt Davis' Aerial Photograph

After spending a year documenting a number of Philly subcultures with his chamber-jazz ensemble, Davis moved to Manhattan and undertook a similar project there. Both efforts yielded rich music from his unique combination of classical strings and jazz horns. 4 p.m., Fergie's Pub, 1214 Sansom St.

Tomas Fujiwara & The Hookup

The adventurous drummer and his incredible quintet celebrate the release of its fantastic new album, "After All Is Said," with pianist Kris Davis joining for the occasion. 5:45 p.m., Chris' Jazz Cafe

Ernest Stuart

To wrap up the day, the fest's founder puts on his musician's hat and picks up his trombone. 6:15 p.m., Time restaurant/bar

Get your geek on at the Philadelphia Science Festival

You don't have to be a scientist to want to play a giant game of Galaga.

RACHEL VIGODA
@rachelatmetro
rachel.vigoda@metro.us

There's nothing nerdy about the annual Philadelphia Science Festival, kicking off Friday and traveling to museums, libraries, bars, breweries, restaurants, the ballpark and the Parkway for nine days.

"Philadelphia really is a science city," says Frederic Bertley, senior vice president of science and education at The Franklin Institute, the main organizer of the fest. "The Franklin Institute and its collaborators created this festival to illuminate the wonders of science. You can't get up in the morning and get through the day without being impacted by science — so let's make science accessible."

Bertley says the festival is geared to anyone of any age: "From the womb to the tomb." (The tomb part also comes in at a cemetery in North Philly, where an astronomer will discuss how to look at the night sky.)

Bertley told us about three major events not to miss. For the full lineup, go to www.philasciencefestival.org.

Science After Hours 8-Bit Night

Friday, 7 to 10 p.m.
The Franklin Institute, 222 N. 20th St.
$15 non-members/$10 members

"This is our kick off, here at the mothership," Bertley says. The theme is classic video games: play Galaga on the planetarium dome, learn the science behind Oregon Trail and Frogger, and dissect an arcade machine — all while sipping the official Yards Brewing Company's Science Festival beer, Parallel Brewniverse.

The nine-day festival culminates in a Science Carnival on the Parkway. THE PHILADELPHIA SCIENCE FESTIVAL

"We wanted to create a massive carnival and festival that can showcase science in all of its glory."
Bertley

Discovery Day

Saturday, from 10 a.m.
Various locations

Discover science outdoors at spots all over the city, including Clark Park and the Schuylkill Center for Environmental Education. We're particularly intrigued by Mess Fest at Smith Memorial Playground & Playhouse, which will have Alka Seltzer rockets, a Mentos and Coke experiment, a massive soap monster and slime-making.

Science Carnival

May 2, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.
Ben Franklin Parkway

The Parkway will be lined with over a 100 "tents and kiosks doing everything from computers, to infomatics, to robotics, to the science of food — you name it, everything is there," Bertley says. He left out the zoo animals, recreated forensic crime scene and helicopter.

Bertley also promises an "explosive finale" — but says you'll have to show up to see what it is.

Jazz dancer/choreographer Kelli Moshen and her company present her latest work, "The Hidden Truth," exploring "the most unique and mysterious inner workings of woman's psyche." Sigmund Freud famously despaired of finding an answer to the question, "What does a woman want?" Perhaps dance can succeed where mansplaining failed.

THEATER

'Jeffrey Dahmer: Guilty but Insane'

Sunday through May 9
BrainSpunk Theater
2825 Ormes St.
$10-$20, 215-278-9504
www.brainspunktheater.com
BrainSpunk Theater presents this new one-man show written and performed by Josh Hitchens, providing an up-close and personal encounter with one of America's most notorious serial killers — perhaps, for some, too close for comfort. Hitchens focuses on one of the first questions we ask whenever a person commits such monstrous acts: Where is the line between insanity and sanity, confusion and guilt?

COMEDY

Karen's Dream

Friday and Saturday
Plays and Players Theatre
1714 Delancey St.
$7, 800-838-3006
karensdream.brownpapertickets.com
The all-female sketch group ManiPedi performs this comedy show, mixing dance, spoken word and music in with their theatrical stylings, all to delve deep into the subconscious of Karen. Who is Karen? You'll just have to find out. Other performers include the Wire Mothers, performing a tribute to fictional would-be Broadway composer Mel Buttermench, and Baltimore's Wham City Comedy.

Noah Baumbach's first film, from 1995, tells the stories of a group of college graduates who remain on campus, desperate to avoid a confrontation with the so-called "real world" — because, as another film of the era declared, reality bites. Despite its two-decade vintage, this Generation X tale seems just as relevant as it did back in the day.

MATTHEW DINARO

THEATER

PAOLA NOGUERAS

'Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?'

Through May 17
Plays and Players Theatre, 1714 Delancey St.; $25-$50, 215-218-4022; www.theatreexile.org
Theatre Exile presents Edward Albee's notorious 1962 play about a bitter, married couple who draw a younger couple into the madness of their relationship, which resembles trench warfare far more than a marriage. Lost in shared illusions and drowned in booze, they're the perfect picture of the dysfunctional and are examples to live against. Bottles are broken, but hearts seem to have been shattered much earlier.

Serene mountain drives in Virginia

Running from northwest Virginia to the Smoky Mountains, Skyline Drive and the Blue Ridge Parkway offer a relaxing escape from the congestion of East Coast cities.

The trip starts in Front Royal, Virginia, just 75 miles from Washington. The pretty town is at the entrance to the Shenandoah National Park and Skyline Drive, so it is always busy with hikers, backpackers, mountain bikers and motor tourists.

The town boasts that it is the Canoe Capital of Virginia. Located where two rivers connect to form the main stem of the Shenandoah River, it's a destination for paddlers and tubers. The conditions range from gentle float trips to intermediate white water. Several outfitters offer equipment rental, guided tours and lodging packages. For more information, visit www.discoverfrontroyal.com.

Skyline Drive ambles through the wilderness of Shenandoah National Park (www.nps.gov/shen). The speed limit on the 105-mile, two-lane road is 35mph, perfect for relaxing and enjoying the view. There are 75 scenic overlooks, plus waterfalls and easy walks just off the road. For hikers and backpackers, the park has over 500 miles of trails. Ranger stations have maps and other vital information for drivers and hikers. They also offer guided hikes and animal encounter programs.

The speed limit on Skyline Drive is a leisurely 35mph, perfect for taking in the view.

Local inhabitants, including whitetail deer, black bear, wild turkey and red fox, roam freely, so keep your camera ready. Rather than drive the route in one day, stay overnight at one of the lodges or cabins in the park. Visit www.goshenandoah.com for information on lodgings.

The Blue Ridge Parkway (www.nps.gov/blri) connects seamlessly with Skyline Drive near Waynesboro. I-64 connects here if you need to loop back east. You'll find historic and cultural spots sharing the scenic views along this road. Plan to stop at Peaks of Otter, which was "the" mountain resort in the mid-1800s, and Mabry Mill, which demonstrates how resourceful, creative and just plain tough mountain settlers were.

History on display in Lyon

Musee des Confluences

France's second city, Lyon, is renowned for its food, but it should be equally famous for its fine collection of unusual museums.

As well as conventional art and history collections, there are museums here devoted to the cinema, fabrics, marionettes and Lyon's role in the resistance movement during the World War II.

To those, now add the Musee des Confluences, which opened in December 2014.

This stunning new museum takes its name from its location at the spot where the city's two rivers, the Saone and the Rhone, meet. The building itself looks like a spaceship, and the museum's aim is nothing less than to tell the history of the world. It's a lofty ambition, but when you're still there after several hours, you might decide it has achieved it.

With over 3,000 items on display, from dinosaurs to waffle-makers, and all shown with imagination and flair, this has instantly become one of the world's great museums.

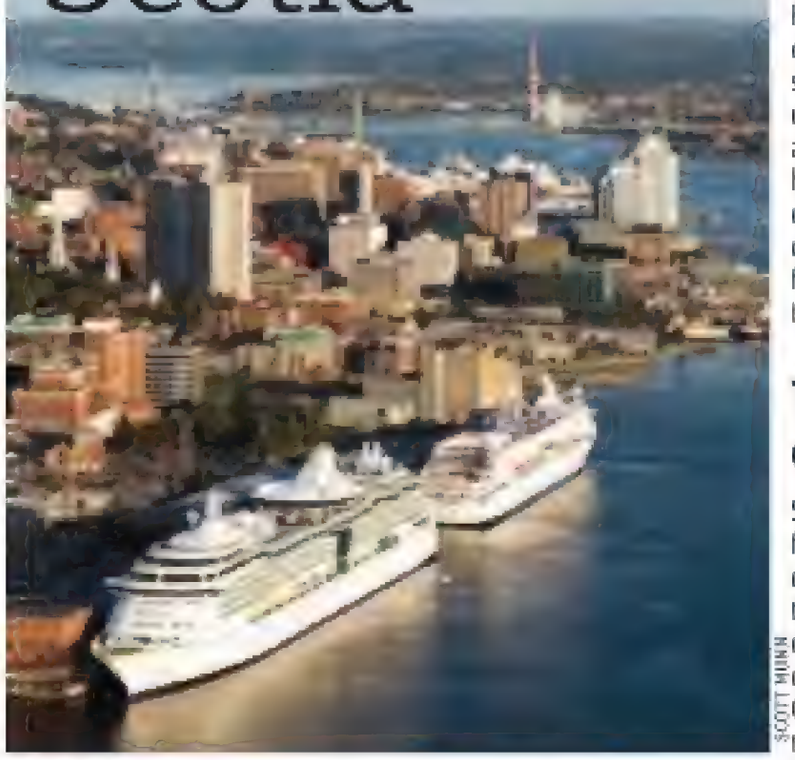
Touring Halifax, Nova Scotia



SCOTT MUNN

This year, Cunard Cruise Lines celebrates its 175th anniversary, and this is just one of many excellent reasons to visit Halifax, Nova Scotia, the birthplace and home of founder Samuel Cunard.

The major commercial hub of Canada's Atlantic Provinces, Halifax has great shopping, dining and nightlife, but its long seafaring history continues to underpin the city's enormous appeal: The remains of a vast hilltop fortress still keep watch over the bay; cruise ships and occasionally tall ships still frequent the harbor; and a salty tang still pervades the air.

The Cunard connection

Samuel Cunard, born in 1787, founded what is still a major cruise line. Its very name evokes the golden age of trans-Atlantic crossings, when the iconic, original Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary were the way to travel. As part of the anniversary celebrations, the Queen Mary 2 will be sailing into Halifax on July 10.

Lobster at the Shore Club

SCOTT MUNN

Farmers Market at Keith's Brewery

MARTHA MACPHERSON HARTLING

In 1912, one of Cunard's ships, the Carpathia, rescued survivors of the Titanic disaster (many of those who perished are buried in Halifax's Fairview Lawn Cemetery). The Maritime Museum of the Atlantic (www.maritimemuseum.novascotia.ca) tells this and other stories.

Welcome to Canada

Between 1928 and 1971 more than a million people — refugees, war brides, seekers of a better life — passed through the Pier 21 immigration shed, now home to the Canadian Museum of Immigration at Pier 21 (www.pier21.ca). Reopening in May 2015 after a major expansion, it provides insight into the contributions those people made to the nation's culture, economy and way of life.

Breathe the sea air

The waterfront is lined by historic buildings housing interesting little shops, art and craft galleries, a great farmers market and some of the city's best restaurants and bars, many with patios overlooking the water. Festivals, events and street entertainers keep it buzzing spring through fall, and scenic boat trips (including North America's longest-running salt-water ferry) bring the maritime experience to life.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21
Love and romance are on the rise. You will feel like socializing. Reach out to people you haven't seen in a while.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20
If you need help bolstering your self-confidence, attend a seminar conducive to raising personal awareness. Don't be so hard on yourself.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22
Delays, frustration and anger are likely to surface if you deal with bureaucratic agencies. Catch up on some correspondence.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22
Improve your home environment by rearranging furniture. Now is a great time to clear out any clutter.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22
Implement a change of pace, and begin intellectual pursuits that are enjoyable and educational. Make a point to increase your knowledge.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22
Unanticipated home repairs will stretch your budget. Shop around for the best value. Do whatever it takes to keep the peace. Refuse to get into a squabble.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21 You will feel confused about recent events. Spend time with an elderly or experienced individual.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21 Your instincts will be on target, allowing you to make the right choice. Don't be afraid to speak up. A travel opportunity will lead to an adventure.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Slow things down a notch where romantic matters are concerned. Being too eager will cause the object of your desire to question your intentions.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Upgrading your skills will open up career options. Your anxiety will decrease as you become comfortable with what you are learning.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20
You will dazzle everyone around you. Your personality will allow you to overcome competition.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20
You will be discontent with personal matters. An unfortunate situation will explode if you can't control your temper. Listen to all sides of a situation before judging. EUGENIA LAST

Letters to the editor

Workers do deserve pay

Re: 'If fast food workers want more money, they should earn it' (Metro, April 22) Jennifer M. Clark's letter to the editor is a re-statement of the same idea that has been spouted non-stop by a large number of people. But the problem is, they are just flat-out wrong in every way imaginable.

People deserve the pay they can force their employer to pay, no employer pays well because they are nice — so if fast food workers want to cost their employers' money until it is cheaper to pay them a 2015 wage than try to keep them at 1970's wage levels, that is called capitalism.

Wages SHOULD have gone up along with inflation, as prices did, but this did NOT happen. And while it would be nice, according to some, to restore slavery by means of wages a century or more out-of-date, it is actually a terrible idea in an economic view. I won't get into moral or social justice points of view since it would be like Latin to the people who are pro-poverty.

Another point on the pay deserved: Do professional football players really deserve millions of dollars for playing a game? Do movie stars deserve millions for playing pretend? Of course not; they get it not because they deserve it or their skills are so uncommon that it is a necessity, but because they held the employers over a barrel until their demands were met.

Nothing more special than Penn Relays

Penn Relays. One of the most prestigious events in all of track and field starts this weekend in Philly.

Just how big a deal are the Penn Relays? Consider the words of Marcus O'Sullivan, who not only ran for Villanova in the early '80s before taking over as coach 17 years ago, but for the Irish Olympic team as well.

"I equate the stress here to what I had in the Olympic games," said O'Sullivan, a four-time Olympian said. "This meet has defined me as a person. This is where I learned to be accountable. It's important for us to understand as team, the buck stops here. This is where they get judged on."

The "judging" actually got underway Tuesday with the start of the decathlon and women's heptathlon. It will only continue to heat up through the weekend, as literally thousands of runners make their way through the paddock area onto the track.

For those who've never been here before or even those who make it an annual ritual, it doesn't take long to realize the Relays are different.

"I can remember standing under the rail with my coach," Relays Director Dave Johnson recalled thinking back to his high school days. "The biggest meet I'd been to was the Chichester Relays which had 400 people. So to come here to see a track meet with thousands of people enjoying the sport at this level was enthralling. It's just an amazing place."

Quoted

"The Penn Relays are the ultimate 'take the stick and go for it' race. Coming back to Penn helps prepare us for the rest of the year."

Little has changed in terms of the layout and vast numbers who come to Philadelphia each year to compete the last weekend in April.

Back then, not as many of the national powers, like LSU, Stanford and Oregon would make the trek East. Now they wouldn't miss it.

"I'm sitting in my office with three Penn Relays wheels (presented to the winning relay teams) on the wall," said Stanford's Chris Miltenberg. "We take it really seriously."

Relays could give break to the next Bolt

Penn Relays. Stars are born every year at Franklin Field.

As one of the preeminent track and field events not only in the United States, but in the world, there are likely a bevy of future Olympians and World Championship competitors in the field this weekend on the campus of the University of Pennsylvania.

One thing about running here is that anything can happen.

First, the runners must make their way though the paddock area, where the officials line them up and send them off like cattle only to bring in the next group. Then they must keep hold of the baton amid the jostling and roars of the crowd, who might actually be cheering a high jumper as much as the racers. Finally, they must not be intimidated by the names on the other jerseys.

Just the facts

The Penn Relays began in 1895 and it is the oldest U.S. track and field meet.

- Usain Bolt and the Jamaican 4X100 relay squad hold the event record, set in 2010.
- In 2001, Michael Johnson ran his final race on U.S. soil at the event.
- Marion Jones and her teammates won the 1600-meter relay in 2002.

Much easier said than done.

"If you can maintain your concentration and focus at the Penn Relays it makes it that much easier when you get in pressure situations like conference championships and the NCAAs," said LSU coach Dennis Shaver, whose men's and women's sprint teams figure to duel with Texas A&M for top honors. "Obviously there's a million things going on and a million excuses for being distracted. I think it's a great experience for the kids."

Not just American kids, either. Jamaica has been sending its high schools' top runners here to the Relays for more than 50 years. Look into the stands and you'll see those distinctive green, black and gold flags waving at the sight of Calabar, Kingston, St. Jago, Vere Tech and many others.

Yes. Usain Bolt ran here. So don't be surprised if it turns out the next Usain Bolt is running here this weekend.

"For people who've never been here before," said Dave Johnson, "it's a mind-boggling experience."

All right here in our own backyard.

Local loss

No Owls in field this weekend

One thing you won't find is the cherry and white among the men. While the women's team remains, other than fielding a club team in the 4x100 Olympic Development relay, Temple men will be a no-show at the Relays. Men's track and field became one of the casualties when the school voted to drop seven sports in December, 2013. This will be the first time the Relays takes place without them. JON MARKS
